Everyone knows the police protect the law.
Nobody asks who protects the police from themselves.

For thirty-five years, Dato' Rahman Aziz has believed that criminals are the enemy and that an honest man is enough to make the truth win.

Then Task Force ORION starts to fail. Raids find empty warehouses with the food still warm. Evidence thins. Witnesses disappear. Someone always knows what the police are about to do.

Inspector Nur Aisyah Othman of Internal Integrity has been sent to find the leak. Her orders point at the task force's own commander.

The Circle has no leader and no membership list. It runs on favours, information and fear, and the harder Rahman looks, the more of it he finds inside the institution he gave his life to.
